

a full service aviation development company

December 3, 2008

To whom it may concern;

I have had the pleasure of working with Paul Arcella, president of CSR Heavy Construction, Inc. (CSR) and his team for the past seven years. While I was the regional director of construction for Tri-C Construction Co., Inc., CSR performed complete Sitework services on numerous CVS Pharmacy projects throughout Broward and Palm Beach counties; and for the past three years, as senior project manager here at Holland/Sheltair, CSR has successfully completed several projects at the Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport and the Fort Lauderdale Hollywood International Airport.

Paul Arcella believes in building relationships, understands the client's needs and takes a personal interest in every project to ensure a level of quality that my clients deserve and expect. Paul has passed that philosophy down to each and every one of his dedicated employees, from his office staff to his field crews, who arrive at the jobsite with a complete understanding of their scope of work and the ability to execute the work in a professional manner.

As a project manager, there are many factors that come into play when awarding a contract. While the budget is very important, it is just as important to be able to rely on proper information from pre-construction services such as estimating and shop drawing submittals, to supervision, progress billings, close-out and warranty of the work in place. CSR provides all of these facets on a consistent basis, which is why I will continue to work with CSR on future projects and would also recommend CSR for any project.

Sincerely,
